That is a lot of trusts in there! An investor would need to understand this before buying an index based on it.

Thanks for the heads up on the updated list.

You guys up there in Canada need to check out the New Zealand sharemarket for dividend stocks. We have the highest average dividend payouts in the world. I think it is about 6-7% gross. It is not unheard of to get 10% plus in quite a number of stocks...

Thanks for a great blog - hugely helpful.

Could you tell me where you go to get your 10 year financial data (growth rates, high and low prices etc) - which websites? Sorry if the answer is buried in your blog somewhere!

Thanks in advance d

Hi D, thanks for that.

Get a list of all the companies on New Zealand's NZX try the NZX website here: http://www.nzx.com/market/price\_by\_stock/securities\_a

Then use the stock codes that interest you from the list and enter them at the yahoo site <http://finance.yahoo.com/> on their symbol lookup search feature.

Use .nz at the end of the Nz stock symbol you enter in that search box and you will get all the data you need.

I only found the site about 6 months ago and it really is a good one for all countries stockmarkets.

Regards, Darren

Share Investor,

Which of those companies that you mentioned have actually increased their dividend payments to shareholders without interruption for more than 10 years?

Check this out:
